PARLIAMENTARY, Jakarta – Secretary General (Sekjen) of the Indonesian House of Representatives (DPR RI) Indra Iskandar expressed the importance of the involvement of the younger generation in the formation of public policy. According to him, the DPR cannot work alone and his party ensures that the hopes of the younger generation can truly be channeled in decision-making in Parliament.

One of the efforts made, Indra said, was to establish communication between students and pupils with the Campus Parliament and Youth Parliament since 2008. "This is the mandate taken by the DPR when it committed to being with parliaments around the world," he said at the "DPR Connect" activity entitled 'DPR and the Young Generation: Collaboration for Change' in the Abdul Muis Room, Parliament Complex, Jakarta, Wednesday (12/2/2025).

Collaboration with the young generation is to prove that politics is a shared responsibility that requires competence, capability, and integrity. "The more good people who enter the DPR, the faster Indonesia will prosper," said Indra Iskandar.

With that dream, Indra Iskandar said, his party has prepared a number of strategic steps to strengthen communication with the younger generation, starting from digital platforms to provide broad access to the public to discussions with youth and student communities.

"This initiative aims to directly absorb their aspirations regarding various national issues and increase understanding of the role and function of the DPR in the democratic system," said Indra Iskandar.

Furthermore, Indra said that DPR Connect is one of the efforts to make the DPR more open to the public, but also how the younger generation can participate more actively in democracy.

"We invite new ideas, fresh thoughts, and active participation from all young generations of Indonesia. Let us together build a parliament that is more aspirational, transparent, and close to the people. Hopefully today's discussion will provide new insights and real steps for all of us in realizing a parliament that is more responsive to the needs of the community," he concluded. •we/aha
